The Stalinist Trial of Bishop Czesław Kaczmarek, the Ordinary of the Diocese of Kielce

Abstract

The Kielce Bishop Czesław Kaczmarek is rightly considered one of the martyrs of the Catholic Church in Poland during the Stalinist era. He was the only bishop to be tried by the communist authorities. The allegations of cooperation with Germany and spying for the US were propaganda and nothing to do with the truth. For several years, the bishop had been kept in prison and was subjected to a brutal investigation. The authorities also imprisoned a number of priests and nuns. The Kaczmarek trial, as shown by events in the courtroom, was directed not only against him but against the entire Church in Poland and the Vatican. The communist authorities did not cease their repressions against the Kielce ordinary, after 1956, seeing in Czesław Kaczmarek a determined enemy of the system.

By the end of the 1940s, after the destruction of the underground and elimination of political opposition, the Catholic Church was to remain the only organised institution over which the totalitarian communist authorities exerted no control only or to a certain extent. However, the everyday reality of Stalinist times in Poland included measures aimed at the destruction of the Church through quite a literal attack on the clergy, their structures, material living conditions and their moral authority, as well as through creating the collaborationist movement of “patriot priests.”

The state and party authorities also organised show trials of selected members of the clergy, which through discrediting and bullying constituted an equally important factor in the war against the Catholic Church. In the early 1950s, the Polish society was shaken by many trials, also those aimed at the Archdiocese of Krakow. One must mention the Wolbrom trial<sup>1</sup>, the Krakow curia trial<sup>2</sup> and one of the most publicised during the Stalinist times, i.e., the so-called Kielce curia trial of Bishop Czesław Kaczmarek, the ordinary of the Diocese of Kielce, and his associates<sup>3</sup> who – as Stalinist propaganda put it – formed an “anti-state and anti-socialist centre.”

From the late 1940s and for many years on, the Diocese of Kielce became a testing ground for the totalitarian communist regime’s fight against the Catholic Church. From 1938 the diocese was led by Rev. Czesław Kaczmarek, PhD, who had studied at the University of Lille and had social work experience

<sup>1</sup> The Wolbrom trial was held before the Military District Court of Krakow on 16–18 January and 20 January 1951. Ten people were put in the dock, including two priests from the Wolbrom parish, a part of the Diocese of Kielce: Vicar Zbigniew Gadomski and the parish priest Piotr Oborski. The priests were mainly accused of conspiring with the Underground Army (also called the Polish Army) and complicity in murder. The priests were sentenced to life imprisonment on account of multiple charges. Rev. Oborski was never acquitted and died in 1952. See also R. <sup>2</sup> The so-called Krakow curia trial was held before the Military District Court of Krakow on 21–26 January 1953. The defendants were priests from Krakow: Rev. Józef Lelito, Rev. Franciszek Szymonek, Rev. Wit Modest Brzycki and Rev. Jan Pochopień, as well as a few laymen. The jury under Lt Col Mieczysław Widaj imposed three death sentences. Rev. Józef Lelito’s death sentence was subsequently altered to life imprisonment. See also F. Musiał, M. Lasota, Kościół zraniony. Proces księdza Lelity i sprawą kurii krakowskiej, Kraków 2003; P. gained in his home Diocese in Płock.<sup>4</sup> There were probably many reasons why it was actually the Bishop of Kielce to be arrested, imprisoned and, finally, tried in court. Hardly had the war ended when the communist authorities started to gather evidence against the bishop. His several steps did not go unnoticed: major efforts for the restitution of ecclesiastical property, failure to sign the Stockholm Appeal or resistance against the 1950 agreement between the state and the Church.<sup>5</sup> The authorities may have also manipulated the case of the so-called green notebook, in which Rev. Leonard Świderski, a personal enemy of the bishop, described the allegedly immoral life led by the ordinary.<sup>6</sup> However, the main factor that seems to have decided against the bishop was his objection to tolerating the pro-government movement of “patriot priests.”<sup>7</sup> The opportunity to arrest Bishop Kaczmarek arose with the already mentioned Wolbrom trial of priests from the Diocese of Kielce, which took place before the Military District Court in Krakow in January 1951. The authorities did not fail to seize the opportunity and on January 20th, 1951 a group of MBP (Ministry of Public Security) functionaries led by Colonel Józef Świątło entered the Kielce curia. After the entire day of questioning, Bishop Kaczmarek was arrested and transported to Mokotów Prison in Warsaw.

Pursuing the investigation against the bishop, the security authorities arrested priests and nuns as well as lay persons connected to the curia of Kielce, or to those who had been detained. The following clergymen from the Diocese of Kielce were imprisoned: Jan Jaroszewicz (January 20th, 1951); Mieczysław Połoska (January 22nd, 1951); Szczepean Sobalski, the rector of the Seminary (August 31st, 1951); Jan Danilewicz, the treasurer of the Curia (September 10th, 1951), Franciszek Tomczyk, the parish priest of the Christ the King Parish in the Baranówek district of Kielce (September 1st, 1951); Władysław Widłak, the procurator of the Seminary (August 30th, 1951); Henryk Peszko, the notary of the Curia (January 12th, 1952); Roman Zelek, the parish priest of the Cathedral (January 12th, 1952); Romuald Błaszcakiewicz (February 7th, 1952); Józef Rybczyk (February 25th, 1952) and Józef Dąbrowski, the secretary of the ordinary, who was arrested in the street in Kielce on September 4th, 1952.<sup>8</sup> Moreover, a few or even several more priests were imprisoned during the first weeks of the investigation. Rev. Adam Molisak from Busko Zdrój was held in the Security Service offices for three days. Rev. Adam Ludwik Szafrański was detained in prison in Foch Street in Kielce. Rev. Piotr Styczeń was intimidated through repeated searches conducted with the aim of breaking and recruiting him; he was being “talked into testifying against the ordinary”<sup>9</sup>

In connection with the Kaczmarek case, the authorities undertook apprehensions of priests, as has already been mentioned, throughout the country. Among others, in the Diocese of Katowice Rev. Rudolf Adamiec was arrested with the view of serving as a link between Bishop Kaczmarek’s “espionage” and Silesia.<sup>10</sup> In the aftermath of the Kielce case, in the Diocese of Sandomierz

<sup>8</sup> More priests (those arrested on other charges, e.g. Rev. Stanisław Marchewka detained on 16 July 1947 in Świdnica) were also subject to investigation. Altogether in the Stalinist period the following priests from the Kielce Diocese were incarcerated: Rev. Stanisław Połetek, Rev. Piotr Banach, Rev. Tadeusz Marchaj, Rev. Stanisław Ryńca, Rev. Stefan Rzemieniec. See J. Śledzianowski, Ksiądz Czesław Kaczmarek..., Kielce 2008, pp. 244–245; J. Żurek, Marchewka Stanisław, in: Leksykon duchowieństwa..., vol. 1, p. 171.

<sup>10</sup> R. Adamiec, Czyścic, Paris 1985, pp. 20, 36. The testimony given by Bishop Kaczmarek was used again long after his trial in order to prepare operational procedures against e.g.

two priests were arrested: Stefan Siedlecki, a professor and procurator in the Sandomierz Seminary and Stefan Rola, the parish priest of the All Saints parish in Starachowice.<sup>11</sup> In the Diocese of Włocławek Rev. Jan Grajnert was detained.<sup>12</sup> Furthermore, Public Security functionaries arrested twelve nuns coming from various religious orders, who were one way or another connected with the curia of Kielce, worked in the diocese or whose work outside the diocese might be taken advantage of according to the needs of the investigation. These are the names of the detained: Albina (Eleonora) Budzowska, Cecylia (Maria) Klamut, Laurencja (Alojza Rozalia) Długosz, Błażeja (Rozalia) Tomalak, Germana (Stanisława) Poprawa, Beatrix (Jadwiga) Kirkor, Izabella (Jadwiga) Machowska, Benigna (Julia) Westwalewicz, Domicela (Helena) Gonet, Filipa (Weronika) Janusewicz, Ermina (Stanisława) Jędryczka and Syksta (Waleria) Niklewska.<sup>13</sup>

Apart from priests and religious sisters, the list of the arrested also comprised lay persons, such as: Józef Stemler, the head of the Polish American Council; Tadeusz Chromecki, an official in the Ministry of Foreign Affairs; Jan Archita, a curia employee; Jan Brożek, a sacristan and even Hipolit Modrzejewski, Bishop Kaczmarek's dentist.<sup>14</sup> Prosecutor Jan Wrzeszcz, who worked as a lawyer for the diocese, was also arrested.<sup>15</sup>

From the first days of his imprisonment, the Security Service subjected the ordinary, as well as others detained within the framework of the case, to an extremely rigorous investigation. A special group of investigators was formed.<sup>16</sup>

<sup>16</sup> The whole governing body of the security service took part in the investigation: the head of the investigation department of the Ministry of Public Security Col. Józef Różański; the head of department V meant to fight against the Church Col. Julia Brystygier; Col. Adam Humer; undersecretary of the Ministry of Public Security Gen. Roman Romkowski and the Ministry

Researchers have established that just in the course of the preparatory procedure to the main trial, Bishop Kaczmarek was interrogated as much as 223 times; Rev. Jan Danilewicz – 167 times and S. Waleria Niklewska – 120 times.<sup>17</sup> The arrested were totally cut off from the external world, subjected to the rigours of prison and the “conveyor method” of interrogations, which lasted for hours on end without any possibility to use the toilet. The detainees suffered hunger and were surrounded by collaborating inmates. All the employed methods significantly affected the arrested and served to break them.<sup>18</sup> In the case of Bishop Kaczmarek, with the help of the secret collaborator sharing the cell, investigators managed to seize his secret messages to Primate Stefan Wyszyński and knew the information he wished to conceal. The collaborating inmate drew up almost daily reports on Bp. Kaczmarek’s behaviour in the cell. In the case of Rev. Jan Danilewicz, the secret informer was able to freely manipulate the priest.<sup>19</sup>

As part of the investigation, a special team of the Ministry of Public Security functionaries conducted a search in the Cathedral of Kielce, looking for allegedly hidden weapons, grenades and a radio station, which were to provide evidence of attempts to abolish the “worker-peasant authority.” These materials were never released.<sup>20</sup> In turn, Public Security functionaries from the Office of Public Security minister Gen. Stanisław Radkiewicz. The investigation team also included Sgt. Józef Fugas, Capt. Władysław Zdanowicz, Capt. Bogdan Lisowski, 2Lt Mieczysław Habinka, 2Lt. Wincenty Kołaczyk, Lt. Bogdan Kiełbasa, 2Lt. Stefan Miszewski, Capt. Stanisław Morawski, 2Lt. Kazimierz Opara, Lt. Edmund Szulc and Maj. Jerzy Kędziora. However, it is less astounding if one remembers that J. Tokarska-Bakir's source of information was Col. Adam Humer. See B. Szaynok, Utrwalanie uproszczeń, Więź, issue 2/2018, p. 97, a review of J. in Kielce conducted a search in the monastery of the Sisters of the Holy Family of Nazareth in Kielce in 5 Słowacki Street and in the flats of two families who were the sisters' close friends.<sup>21</sup> It is worth noting that the atmosphere created by the imprisonment of the bishop, several priests and nuns was used by the authorities to intimidate the rest of the clergy and the congregation and to keep the "hostile milieu" under an even more thorough surveillance. The general atmosphere in Kielce was literally unbearable.<sup>22</sup> As a result of the psychological pressure exerted on priests, many of them were forced to sign the agreement to cooperate with the security apparatus. From January 1st, 1951 to April 1st, 1951 twelve informers were recruited. Furthermore, with the help of agents also among the clergy, the Security Office was working out several priests in various districts, professor priests of the Kielce Higher Seminary and members of religious orders. In total, we know the code names of over 30 informers.<sup>23</sup>

Primate Wyszyński, Bishop Zygmunt Choromański and the clergy of Kielce intervened in vain to acquit the ordinary.<sup>24</sup> Eventually, when Moscow gave the green light Polish authorities decided to take legal action against Bishop Kaczmarek in a public show trial.<sup>25</sup> It was assumed that he was the head of an 'anti-state and anti-socialist centre'. Bishop Kaczmarek was put in the dock with his 'associates': Rev. Jan Danilewicz, Rev. Józef Dąbrowski, Rev. Władysław Widłak and Sister Waleria Niklewska. The main charges brought against the bishop involved spying for Washington and the Vatican, attempting to overthrow socialism in Poland using force and conspiring with Nazi Germans during the war. While setting up the trial and accusations, the communist authorities drew upon Bishop Kaczmarek's real contact with American post-war ambassador in Poland, Arthur Bliss Lane. They also found a use for the bishop's visits at the Pius XI House in Warsaw and his pastoral letters from the time of World War II. The accusations thrown against the bishop and his ‘associates’ were, for the most part, fabricated. For example, in the well-known pastoral letter of October 9th, 1939 the word dignity was replaced with hospitality to better serve the propaganda.<sup>26</sup>

The trial took place before Military District Court of Warsaw in 14–21 September 1953. Making use of previously drafted ‘notes’,<sup>27</sup> the accused pleaded guilty. The prosecutors together with the barristers (Mieczysław Maślanko, Bishop Kaczmarek’s ‘counsel’, in particular), condemned the defendants’ actions. For those who observed the proceedings or studied them later on it was obvious that accusations were thrown not only at Bishop Kaczmarek but the whole Church in Poland and the Vatican itself. Primate Wyszyński put it quite aptly when he wrote in his Pro Memoria: “The trial of Bishop Kaczmarek is now being held. But the accused one is not only the bishop but the Holy See, the episcopacy and the ministry. I must firmly admit that I have not been given any instructions from the Holy See and that the See does not want to interfere with political matters in Poland. The alleged suggestion of the Holy Father on the diocese borders in the western parts of Poland, as one of the witnesses testified, is a flight of fantasy. The same applies for the conferences of the episcopacy: as the witnesses now present in court could confess, the conferences have never dealt with economic or political issues in the country. The units of pastoral ministry have always been of purely religious character. They have no relations whatsoever with Akcja Katolicka [Catholic Action]”.<sup>28</sup>

Eventually, on September 22nd, 1953 the Military District Court of Warsaw (Lt Col. Mieczysław Widaj as its head together with Lt Col. Kazimierz Stojanowski, Lt Col. Jan Radwański and Lt. Jan Paramonow) found Bishop Kaczmarek guilty of six separate offences. These were: attempting to overthrow the political system in the Polish People’s Republic as the animator of the ‘anti-state centre’ (art. 86 para. 1 and 2, k.k. WP [Criminal Code of the Polish Army]); economical spying for ‘the American and the Vatican intelligence centres’ (art. 7 m.k.k. [so-called Small Criminal Code]); accepting material benefit (20 thousand dollars) for intelligence activity (art. 6 m.k.k.); spreading war propaganda (art. 1 of the Act of 29th December 1950 – Dz.U.RP [Journal of Laws of the Republic of Poland] vol. 58, no. 521); conspiring with the Germans during the war (Article 2 of the Decree of 31st August 1944); spreading fascism in Poland in the interwar period as well as attenuating ‘the fighting spirit’ of Poles (article 1 of ‘The Decree Concerning the Responsibility for the Disaster of the September 1939 Campaign and Spreading Fascism in Poland’). As a result of these charges Bishop Kaczmarek was sentenced to twelve years of imprisonment. Rev. Jan Danilewicz, Rev. Józef Dąbrowski and Rev. Władysław Widłak were found guilty of attempts to overthrow the political system in Poland. Together with Sister Waleria Niklewska they were also held culpable for economical spying for ‘the American and the Vatican intelligence centres’. Moreover, Rev. Jan Danilewicz was found guilty of accepting material benefit (200 dollars) for intelligence activity (art. 6. m.k.k.), and inspiring war propaganda (article 1 of the Act of 29th December 1950 Dz.U.RP vol. 58, no. 521). Rev. Jan Danilewicz was sentenced to ten years of imprisonment, Rev. Józef Dąbrowski to nine years, Rev. Władysław Widłak to six years and Sister Waleria Niklewska to five years of imprisonment. Their temporary arrest was treated as part of the punishment and Sister Waleria Niklewska was acquitted.<sup>29</sup>

Undoubtedly, the trial of Bishop Kaczmarek corresponded to practices established in the USSR. While it was being conducted, the authorities launched a nationwide propaganda campaign to persuade the society of the justness of the trial, the truth of the accusations and the guilt of the defendants.<sup>30</sup> Following the guidelines of the Organisation Department and the Agitation and Propaganda Department of the Central Committee of the Polish United Workers’ Party (KC PZPR), the campaign included meetings for the active members of the party

The press and radio played an extraordinarily significant role in convincing the society of the clergymen's guilt. News bulletins on the subject were being broadcast by means of loudspeakers and multiple public address systems installed in local community centres.<sup>32</sup> Articles and reports were being published in both widely circulated newspapers with Trybuna Ludu [People's Tribune] leading the way and local press such as Słowo Ludu [The People's Word], which is particularly worth mentioning as it was issued in Kielce and constituted the organ of the Voivodeship Committee of the Polish United Workers' Party in Kielce. Extensive and whistle-blowing articles accused the tried bishop of most despicable crimes: fascist views, collaboration with Nazi Germans, treason and espionage.<sup>33</sup> Słowo Ludu would inform its readers in detailed and extensive reports about the charges against the bishop and published the defendants and witnesses' testimonies as well as the prosecutor's and defender's speeches.<sup>34</sup> Propaganda headlines and headings would leave no doubts: "Traitors in Priestly Robes Acted Against the Nation and Polish State Following Guidelines from the Vatican and Washington."<sup>35</sup> The article entitled "In the Eyes of Simple People" draws particular attention as it comprises the essence of Stalinist hypocrisy and anti-church propaganda: "Bishop Kaczmarek and his associates, in selling out the Homeland in exchange for American dollars, blessed by the Pope, are being tried not only by the judges. They are being tried by the entire nation, who is building a bright, happy future in peace. They are being judged by millions of simple people to whom they wished to bring the greatest disasters: war, captivity, destitution".<sup>36</sup>

According to the logic of a show trial, the condemnation of the “traitor” could not be confined to the courtroom. All the society had to express their “protest and indignation.” Here again the press was an instrument of the propaganda. Słowo Ludu would publish articles entitled “The Kielce Region Society Condemns Bishop Kaczmarek’s Anti-Polish Actions and His Vatican and Washington Principals,”<sup>37</sup> which contain alleged pronouncements of people indignant at those “treacherous actions.” Obviously, the articles present a broad cross-section of the society, “citing” representatives of the workers’ class, peasants and intelligentsia. All the statements direct severe criticism at the defendants, especially the priests. The alleged well-being and happiness prevailing in the People’s Poland is juxtaposed with the “imperial policy pursued” by the clergy. However, some of the opinions strike the reader as unoriginal, inauthentic and thoughtlessly repeating the propaganda mantras.<sup>38</sup> Small wonder “patriot priests” joined the group of “the appalled by the facts” that had been revealed during the trial. Similar articles castigating Bishop Kaczmarek and other priests tried in the case would be published nation-wide, e.g., an article by Rev. Ludwik Mucha in Gazeta Zielonogórska [The Zielona Góra Daily].<sup>39</sup>

The authorities paid meticulous attention to all social reactions arising in connection with the trial. The case truly aroused great interest in the society, though perhaps less so in rural areas. Various departments of the Ministry of Public Security drew up daily reports on noticeable situations and utterances, which were directed at revealing hostile attitudes and actions on the part of the milieux perceived as opposing the system. The state authorities, as well as the Ministry of Public Security, attached particular significance to taking the full advantage of secret agents, which is clearly shown in the preserved archival materials. During the trial, the District Office of Public Security functionaries conducted 44 meetings with informers in the District of Busko, 32 meetings in the District of Włoszczowa, on only two days, 14th and 15th September 1953, there were 38 meetings in the District of Ostrowiec Świętokrzyski, on 15th September 1953 there were 19 meetings in the District of Końskie and 35 meetings in Skarżysko.<sup>40</sup> The reports focus on the utterances and attitudes of diocesan priests, members of religious orders and priests working in the curia.<sup>41</sup> Security Office functionaries monitored religious services, wiretapped sermons preached throughout the voivodeship.<sup>42</sup> It is worth noting that during the trial very few priests stood by the bishop in their pronouncements from the pulpit: Rev. Franciszek Rosłaniec in the Staszów parish, Rev. Stefan Bonar from Chrząstów, Włoszczowa District and an unknown priest from the Czarnca parish, Włoszczowa District.<sup>43</sup>

The present state of research points out that despite the massive propaganda campaign launched by the communist authorities, a substantial part of the society remained unconvinced about the truthfulness of the Kielce curia trial and the plotting of the Vatican and the Polish bishops. A number of people commented on the underlying objectives of the trial.<sup>44</sup> Franciszek Wojciechowicz, a smith from Stromiec village, could be cited here, making his exemplary statement: the trial “serves no other purpose than [providing] a pretext to incite hatred in the society against the Catholic faith; the accusations [are] wholly unjustified.”<sup>45</sup>

The ordeal of the convicted priests did not end with the sentences passed by the Military District Court in Warsaw. The state and investigating authorities made use of the cringing/intimidated and psychologically broken clergymen as witnesses in the so-called spin-off trials, several of which had been conducted to investigate “the alleged connections with the anti-state and anti-socialist centre led by Bishop Kaczmarek” up to 1955.<sup>46</sup> There were even attempts to force him to “convert politically.”<sup>47</sup> Not until the general political change took place in Poland did anything alter in Bishop Kaczmarek and others’ situation. Only on February 7th, 1955 the bishop was allowed a one-year break in serving his sentence. He was forced to return to prison on February 3rd, 1956 and by the decision of the Polish State Council on May 14th, 1956 was ultimately released on May 17th, 1956. Simultaneously, a decision was made to confine the bishop to the Capuchin monastery in Rywadł Królewski, which he left without an authorised permission on September 23rd, 1956.<sup>48</sup> The main court trial was formally closed on March 30th, 1957. The Chief Military Prosecutor Office decided to discontinue the investigation due to the “absence of evidence of guilt.” Finally, by the decision of General Prosecutor Aleksander Bentkowski, the convicted were fully rehabilitated as they “had not committed offences they were charged with.”<sup>49</sup>

Bishop Czesław Kaczmarek’s return to the Diocese of Kielce in 1957, which followed the October thaw, did not end his struggle with the communist authorities. The sharp conflict that lasted until the bishop’s death arose in 1959 and was triggered by his so-called Chinese sermon. As a result, the authorities kept him under surveillance, refused to recognise his right to manage the diocese and persecuted the Seminary through various inspections. Moreover, the Security Service strove to disintegrate the clergy of the diocese through intimidating and forcing the priests to refuse to implement the bishop’s directives. The Higher Seminary in Kielce became a particular target of the harassment directed at the bishop and his diocese, with the authorities openly admitting it: the seminarists were conscripted for the compulsory military service.<sup>50</sup> Attacking Bishop Kaczmarek, the authorities reached again for the libellous Zielony Zeszyt [Green
